Excerpt terms and conditions

This excerpt is available to assist you in the play selection process.

You may view, print and download any of our excerpts for perusal purposes.

Excerpts are not intended for performance, classroom or other academic use. In any of these cases you will need to purchase playbooks via our website or by phone, fax or mail.

A short excerpt is not always indicative of the entire work, and we strongly suggest reading the whole play before planning a production or ordering a cast quantity.

Dramatic Publishing
Nicholas Nickleby,
SCHOOLMASTER

A One-Act Play

By

TIM KELLY

THE DRAMATIC PUBLISHING COMPANY

© The Dramatic Publishing Company, Woodstock, Illinois
 NOTICE ***

The amateur and stock acting rights to this work are controlled exclusively by THE DRAMATIC PUBLISHING COMPANY without whose permission in writing no performance of it may be given. Royalty fees are given in our current catalogue and are subject to change without notice. Royalty must be paid every time a play is performed whether or not it is presented for profit and whether or not admission is charged. A play is performed any time it is acted before an audience. All inquiries concerning amateur and stock rights should be addressed to:

DRAMATIC PUBLISHING
P. O. Box 129, Woodstock, Illinois 60098.

COPYRIGHT LAW GIVES THE AUTHOR OR THE AUTHOR'S AGENT THE EXCLUSIVE RIGHT TO MAKE COPIES. This law provides authors with a fair return for their creative efforts. Authors earn their living from the royalties they receive from book sales and from the performance of their work. Conscientious observance of copyright law is not only ethical, it encourages authors to continue their creative work. This work is fully protected by copyright. No alterations, deletions or substitutions may be made in the work without the prior written consent of the publisher. No part of this work may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopy, recording, videotape, film, or any information storage and retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publisher. It may not be performed either by professionals or amateurs without payment of royalty. All rights, including but not limited to the professional, motion picture, radio, television, videotape, foreign language, tabloid, recitation, lecturing, publication, and reading are reserved. On all programs this notice should appear:

"Produced by special arrangement with
THE DRAMATIC PUBLISHING COMPANY of Woodstock, Illinois"

©MCMLXXXI by
TIM KELLY

Printed in the United States of America
All Rights Reserved
(NICHOLAS NICKLEBY, SCHOOLMASTER)

ISBN 0-87129-901-1

© The Dramatic Publishing Company, Woodstock, Illinois
NICHOLAS NICKLEBY

A One-Act Play

for Six Men and Six Women

CAST OF CHARACTERS
(in order of appearance)

PHOEBE ....................... servant girl, about fourteen
MRS. SNAWLEY .................. an unpleasant stepmother
WILLIAM ........................ Mrs. Snawley’s stepson
MRS. SQUEERS .................. Wackford Squeers’ vulgar wife
FANNY .......................... the Squeers’ vain daughter
MRS. NICKLEBY ................ Nicholas’ mother
NICHOLAS NICKLEBY ............ the new schoolmaster
KATE .......................... Nicholas’ gentle and loving sister
WACKFORD SQUEERS ............ brutal and ignorant schoolmaster
COBBEY ......................... one of Wackford’s pupils
BOLDER ........................ another of Wackford’s pupils
SMIKE* ........................ dim-witted boy who works for Wackford
BOYS ........................ pupils of Dotheboys Hall

Time: Nineteenth Century England
Place: Dotheboys Hall, a boarding school for young boys in Yorkshire, England

*The role of SMIKE may be played by a girl.
The extras who play the BOYS are optional.
PRODUCTION NOTES

Stage Properties:

Desk or table, a few stools or benches. On the desk: pointer and hand bell.

Brought On:

Mrs. Snawley: newspaper; Phoebe: kettle; William: coin; Kate: handkerchief; Mrs. Squeers: large wooden spoon; Nicholas: book; Kate: envelope with letter; William: kettle and spoon.

Historical Note:

It was largely through the popular success of NICHOLAS NICKLEBY that the miserable conditions of the boarding schools for unwanted children in the north of England were exposed and eventually corrected to some extent.
SCENE: A large, dismal area in a decayed and rambling edifice known as Dotheboys Hall. It functions partly as a classroom and partly as a reception hall. A table or desk is UC. Stools or benches are scattered in front of the table.

PHOEBE (offstage R). Do come along, Mrs. Snawley. The mistress will be happy to talk with you.

MRS. SNAWLEY (offstage R). It was Mr. Squeers I was wanting to talk with.

PHOEBE (offstage R). He’s traveling back from London. If you care to wait . . .

(PHOEBE and MRS. SNAWLEY enter from R and move to C. MRS. SNAWLEY, a cold woman who is anxious to get rid of a troublesome stepchild, carries a folded newspaper.)

MRS. SNAWLEY. I’ve got me own affairs to tend. Can’t waste time. I’ll see the wife.

PHOEBE. I’ll fetch her. (She exits L. MRS. SNAWLEY looks about the room.)

MRS. SNAWLEY. Ain’t exactly cozy, but fit enough for troublesome boys. (She calls R.) William! (A pause.) Do you hear me? (A pause.) William!

(WILLIAM enters from R. He looks forlorn and stifles a sob.)
WILLIAM. Yes, Mother.
MRS. SNAWLEY (snapping). Don’t call me Mother. I’m not your mother. Your mother is dead. (WILLIAM fights to control his sobbing.) And stop that sniffling. I never could stand a boy what was partial to sniffles.
WILLIAM. I’m not sniffling.
MRS. SNAWLEY. What are you doing, then? Not crying?
Growing boys don’t cry.
WILLIAM. I’m not crying.
MRS. SNAWLEY. Well, whatever you’re doing – stop it!

(MRS. SQUEERS, the nasty and vulgar wife of the headmaster, enters L and crosses to MRS. SNAWLEY.)

MRS. SQUEERS. You wished to speak with me?
MRS. SNAWLEY. If you’re Mrs. Squeers.
MRS. SQUEERS. The same. (With a false smile.) What a nice boy you’ve got there. A new pupil?
MRS. SNAWLEY. That’s what I wanted to talk to you about.
MRS. SQUEERS (gesturing toward a stool). Pray be seated.
MRS. SNAWLEY. I’m not planning on staying long. (To William. You sit. (WILLIAM sits with his head bowed. MRS. SNAWLEY and MRS. SQUEERS converse as if he weren’t in the room. MRS. SNAWLEY points to some advertisement in the paper.) This caught my eye yesterday morning and I may thank my stars for it.
MRS. SQUEERS. What is it?
MRS. SNAWLEY. An advertisement for this school.
MRS. SQUEERS. My husband must have put it in. He tends to all the pesty business details.
MRS. SNAWLEY (reading). “Education – At Mr. Wackford Squeer’s Academy, Dotheboys Hall in Yorkshire. Youths are boarded, clothed, booked, provided with all necessities, instructed in all languages, living and dead."

MRS. SQUEERS. My Squeery is such a cultured penman when he sets his quill to scribbling them advertisements.

MRS. SNAWLEY (continuing to read). “No extras, no vacations, and diet unparallelled.”

MRS. SQUEERS. I’m famous for me soups.

MRS. SNAWLEY. I don’t want any misunderstandings, so I speak plain out. I have only this month married the boy’s father. As he has little money in his own right, I am afraid he might squander it on the boy.

MRS. SQUEERS. I quite understand, I do. Yes, yes.

(PHOEBE enters carrying a heavy iron kettle.)

PHOEBE. Here’s the kettle. (Mrs. Squeers’ face turns into a mask of anger and subdued rage. She screams at Phoebe.)

MRS. SQUEERS. Not now, you stupid cow! Can’t you see we got a client!

PHOEBE. Only doing me work.

MRS. SQUEERS. Get out!

PHOEBE (mumbling as she exits). Fetch the kettle in, fetch the kettle out. (MRS. SQUEERS turns back to Mrs. Snawley with a sickly-sweet smile on her face.)

MRS. SQUEERS. Servants is such a trial, ain’t they?

MRS. SNAWLEY (with a hard look to William). Like step-children.

MRS. SQUEERS. Quite so. Has it got a name?

MRS. SQUEERS. He’ll have plenty of company at Dotheboys Hall.

MRS. SNAWLEY. I have selected your school because it is far away from my home — as far away as possible. If I enroll William, you're certain there are no holidays — no comings home twice a year?

MRS. SQUEERS. It's a matter of commerce, my dear. As long as you pay the school fee, you'll never have to worry about the lad coming home. At Christmas, he will send you a hand-painted card and that is all.

MRS. SNAWLEY. Then we understand each other?

MRS. SQUEERS. We do, indeed.

MRS. SNAWLEY. His trunk is outside.

MRS. SQUEERS. I'll have it taken care of.

MRS. SNAWLEY. William, stand up. (WILLIAM stands.) You are to give no trouble. Behave. Otherwise, I shall have to complain to your father that you've been wicked and obstinate. It would break his heart.

WILLIAM. I'll give no trouble. I promise.

MRS. SNAWLEY. I bid you good day, Mrs. Squeers.

MRS. SQUEERS. Good day and good-bye, Mrs. Snawley. (MRS. SNAWLEY exits R.)

(FANNY, the Squeers' vain and egotistical teenage daughter, skips out L.)

FANNY. Papa has returned from London. There's a handsome young gentleman with him. I saw them from the upstairs window.

MRS. SQUEERS. Another pupil?

FANNY. He's too old for that. I think it's the new schoolmaster Papa's been hoping to find.

MRS. SQUEERS. Young gentleman? The last thing we need here is a gentleman.